

Jamil Khan is the Chief Strategy and Small Business Officer for H&R Block. In this role, Khan is responsible for helping to identify and lead the company's strategic development and growth opportunities and generate value for stakeholders as it continues to disrupt the tax preparation industry and expand its services.

Khan has more than two decades of experience leading strategy for companies ranging from technology companies to Fortune 100 brands. He has worked on multiple merger and acquisition integrations, defined growth strategies, managed product development and P&Ls, and restructured lagging business units.

Prior to joining H&R Block, Khan served as senior vice president of strategy and business development for a Boston-based technology company focused on disrupting the traditional textbook market, playing an instrumental role in integration efforts following the company's May 1, 2019 announced merger with McGraw Hill. Khan was also head of Americas for the Timex Group, with P&L responsibility for Canada, Mexico, and Latin America. He helped drive major change management processes, established new partnerships and executed the successful turnaround of Timex Canada in 2018. Khan has also led strategy at Staples and Zipcar and served as a strategy consultant for the Boston Consulting Group. He started his career in sales and marketing at Procter & Gamble.

He holds an MBA from Harvard Business School and a bachelor's degree in chemistry from University College London.